In honor of the NAWCC National Convention, HSNY is offering its 101 courses at a special price of $20 per student. Learn more about HSNY's horology offerings here — <https://hs-ny.org/nyc-education>.

This event is exclusive to NAWCC National Convention attendees. No refunds or exchanges on ticket sales.

About Steve Eagle

Steve Eagle is a classically trained watchmaker and serves as the Director of Education for the Horological Society of New York (HSNY). Steve graduated from the Lititz Watch Technicum in 2011, obtaining his diploma, Swiss American Watchmakers Training Alliance (SAWTA), and Certified Watchmaker of the 21st Century (CW21) certifications. Upon graduating he moved to New York City, where he has continued to work as a watchmaker and educator. Since his start with HSNY in 2015, he has grown the program from three students per class to a full workshop that can accommodate up to six students. Steve has also worked to create a traveling education program for HSNY that has taught in every major city in the United States, as well as several international destinations.

About the Horological Society of New York

Founded in 1866, the Horological Society of New York (HSNY) is one of the oldest continuously operating horological associations in the world. Today, HSNY is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization dedicated to advancing the art and science of horology through education. Members are a diverse mix of watchmakers, clockmakers, executives, journalists, auctioneers, historians, salespeople and collectors, reflecting the rich nature of horology in New York City and around the world.

Since the 1950s, the Horological Society of New York has offered classes to the public, taught by professional watchmakers. These award-winning classes further HSNY's mission by making horological education accessible and enjoyable for the public.
